Table of Contents

Your ICP Program Handbook is meant to give you pertinent information about your program and what you can expect from your experience in ICP. However, there are many facets of the CIIS experience that are not included in this Handbook but which govern and regulate life at the Institute. Please be familiar with the latest CIIS Student Handbook, the current CIIS Academic Catalog, and the semester Schedule of Classes. These are official publications that detail administrative and academic policies and procedures.

About the Integral Counseling Psychology Concentration

Founded in 1973 on the recommendation of Dr. Haridas Chaudhuri, the Integral Counseling Psychology (ICP) concentration was the first transpersonally-oriented, “East-West” psychology graduate training in the world. The concentration has evolved into the Integral Counseling Psychology Master of Arts program, which educates future psychotherapists by centering student development in the three pillars of psychology, spirituality, and social justice. Through experiential, contemplative, theoretical, and transformative learning, students deepen self-awareness and hone clinical skills in coursework and practicum placements. Inspired by integral yoga, the program aspires to develop graduates versed in socially engaged spirituality, relational and liberatory approaches, and critical consciousness.

In the context of a supportive community of faculty and students, the program offers rigorous clinical training and psychotherapy practice, integrating experiential and theoretical approaches in order to deepen the personal awareness of students. Graduates earn a Master of Arts in Counseling Psychology degree, which fulfills all academic requirements for Marriage and Family Therapy (LMFT) licensure in California. Students wishing to additionally apply for the LPCC license can do so by taking extra courses beyond the curriculum’s requirements. See the section on LPCC licensure in this handbook for more information. The M.A. in Counseling Psychology concentration in Integral Counseling Psychology is approved by the California Board of Behavioral Sciences to prepare graduates for a professional license or certification in California.

ICP/W Program Learning Outcomes

Our department has developed a set of Learning Outcomes (PLOs) for you to achieve as you progress through your Integral Counseling Psychology curriculum. These are both the standards for your progress and the measures by which you can hold us accountable. We hope that you will use them as a self-assessment tool by reading them over at the beginning of your study, reviewing them with your advisor during your pre-practicum interview, and finally, reflecting on them as a basis for assessing accomplishment in your last Integrative Seminar class.

Although these are documented with our accrediting agencies and will not change during your degree trajectory, this is meant to be a living and evolving list over time. We welcome your input in this process. You may also contact the Program Co-Chairs who welcome your feedback.

1. Master Clinical Skills and Competencies: Students will master and demonstrate skills sufficient to serve as associate MFT or LPCC therapists at the master's in counseling level.
2. Apply Psychological Theory and Philosophy: Students will gain a broad and deep knowledge of theory and philosophy of historical and contemporary scholarship associated with the field of psychotherapy. Through applying and critiquing a variety of topics, theories, and approaches, students have an opportunity for a more in-depth mastery of a selection of these.
3. Demonstrate Transformative Personal Growth: Through participating in personal growth experiences in the context of the program, students will demonstrate self-knowledge, insight, and emotional, cognitive, psychological, and spiritual growth. Students will apply this to their preparation to work as therapists.
4. Demonstrate Literacy in Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion: Students will actively explore, observe, identify, and critique their own filters and biases, and seek to understand and accept their own and others' sociocultural and intersectional identities. This includes demonstrating the impact of power, privilege, cultural humility, equity, and inclusion in the classroom as well as in clinical practice.
5. Synthesize Integral Theory and Philosophy: Students will synthesize the major themes of integral yoga and spiritual philosophies with psychotherapy in the 21st century. Through experiencing integral practices, students will reflect upon connections to their own personal, spiritual, clinical, and professional growth.
6. Develop a Relational and Therapeutic Presence: Students will develop and show compassion, empathy, attunement, and mindfulness in classroom experientials as well as in their clinical work in practicum sites.
7. Demonstrate Professionalism and Ethics: Students will develop and demonstrate skills consistent with the Code of Ethics and Code of Conduct from CIIS and various psychological and spiritual traditions in the classroom, towards peers, staff, and faculty, as well as in clinical practice.

Curriculum

The ICP/W program has been designed to include all of the educational requirements for a master's degree program as mandated by the Board of Behavioral Sciences (BBS), as well as include the unique integral focus of the department. Students who complete this program are eligible to apply for an Associate Marriage and Family Therapist (AMFT) intern number in the state of California. Students may also elect to take additional coursework to gain eligibility for the Licensed Professional Clinical Counselor (LPCC) license in California. The LPCC option includes twelve extra units of coursework. For students in the ICP day program this can be completed in 69 total units. However, students on the LPCC track must replace their units of electives with LPCC coursework. For ICPW students the LPCC track can be completed in 70 units provided they replace their units of general electives. Please note that extra units of financial aid will also be required for the LPCC track and it may take 1-2 extra semesters depending on availability of courses and your own schedule. In addition to the required components for licensure, each course in the ICP/W curriculum is constantly being updated by faculty to balance foundational material with the latest research, readings, spiritual practices, and clinical and social justice trends.

The ICP and ICPW curricula consist of foundational pre-practicum courses during the first 3-5 semesters. These include the courses marked in red on the ICP/W Flow Charts in Appendix A & B. Once these are completed, students move onto the practicum stage of their programs, working in an approved community setting and seeing their own clients while working with approved supervisors and completing other required courses which deepen their skills. The Integrative Seminar then integrates all student learning before graduation.

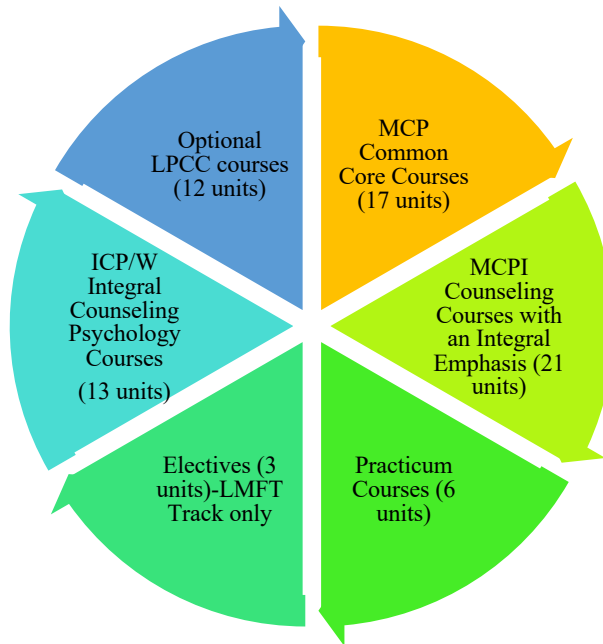

Some courses are housed within ICP/W and some fall under the Master's in Counseling Psychology (MCP) umbrella. See the next page for a breakdown of required units.

Note: ICP courses begin with the prefix ICP or MCPI. ICPW courses begin with the prefix ICPW. All ICP, ICPW, & MCPI courses are managed by the ICP and ICPW program coordinators and ICP Administrative Director. Please contact ICP/W staff and cochairs for questions regarding these courses (email contact info is listed on page 2).

Courses that begin with MCP are shared by all of our counseling psychology programs (Integral Counseling Psychology, Somatic Psychology, Expressive Arts Therapy, Drama Therapy & Community Mental Health) and contain a mix of students across those five programs. MCP courses are managed by the Masters of Counseling Psychology Program Director, Jonalyn Blaha. For questions about these courses, for more information please visit the MCP Sharepoint page or email Jonalyn at jblaha@ciis.edu.

Curricular content warning

Throughout the program, you will be reading and discussing topics that may be disturbing to you and/or your classmates. We include this content for several reasons. Firstly, we believe it is vital to educate you on a breadth of potentially traumatic events and their vicissitudes to prepare you to work as a psychotherapist with clients who have experienced such traumas. In addition to building your knowledge, this education is meant to expand your capacity to stay grounded and unflinching in the face of such client stories. This means that potentially becoming activated and learning how to soothe any personal activation is a necessary and important part of the training process. Finally, we believe that building your knowledge of the field, even its rough edges and problematic history, is necessary so that you may formulate informed critiques of those theories or figures in the field you may find objectionable.

We encourage you to scan through titles of readings and topics in each course and class. Faculty will do their best to alert you to potentially activating topics. However, because each student's background and history is unique, it will not be possible for all potentially activating material to be flagged in advance. Should you find yourself activated by a discussion or reading, we encourage you to first utilize your own self-care practices, community network, and any university resources such as the Wellness Center to address your own emotional and psychological needs. Second, we recommend you engage in intentional processes to determine reasonable protocols that will allow you to still engage with future clients (who may bring in such topics into sessions) with a strong, therapeutic presence. In other words, what steps can you take to be an effective therapist when confronted with these very same topics from clients? These processes may take place in therapy, in reflective practice, in spiritual practice or in consultation with a member of your support network. If challenges arise, you are welcome to reach out to your professor or your academic advisor for further consultation. Please note that you are still responsible for learning the material, and we encourage you to frame your experiences as structured opportunities to practice the skills that you will need in your clinical work.

Regarding Exploration of Self in Counselor Training

An integral focus of counselor training is the centrality of the self as an instrument of change. For the self to be an effective instrument of change requires a high level of self-awareness. A client is at risk to the extent to which their therapists are unaware of themselves and therefore unaware of ways in which they may do harm to the client. This is a primary reason that this exploration of self is necessary for the protection of your future clients and for deepening competency. In addition, students, faculty, and supervisors need to be mindful of the impact of self-disclosure on the learning environment. Information and the manner in which it is shared are at the core of the learning experience and the development of clinical skills.

The exploration of self necessarily involves reflecting on one's inner life and one's life experiences. It is appropriate that each of us make thoughtful choices regarding the extent to which, at any particular time, we make personal disclosures to each other. The level of trust we have in others is a changing reality, which must be taken into account in making these choices. Being self-revealing does not have to feel comfortable to be safe. However, each member of a class must take responsibility for being attentive to and vocal about matters of personal safety. Within the context of this class, everyone is responsible for their emotional safety. The instructor's responsibility is to ensure that appropriate boundaries are being maintained.

With respect to issues of a uniquely personal nature that could potentially cross the boundary between being a student or an instructor in class, versus being client and therapist in counseling, the guiding question must always be: Who does the disclosure serve: am I discussing this matter so as to further my professional training or my client's growth, or am I merely seeking to meet a personal need as if I myself were in individual therapy?

Many classes have a constant focus on issues that can be experienced to varying degrees as provocative, complex, or emotionally charged. It is the belief of the program that it is essential for the growth of counselors and the safety of future clients that these topics are addressed with deliberate attention and care during the academic and training process. It is the responsibility of every student to monitor their own levels of comfort/discomfort, and to take steps to ensure their own well-being while participating as fully as possible in class discussions, readings, and assignments. It is recommended that any student experiencing difficulty with class content seek prompt consultation with the instructor, their advisor, or another faculty member, and if needed, with their therapist, who will provide assistance in successfully navigating the academic context.

Getting Oriented

Program Agreements

Each new cohort has a specific program agreement that outlines all coursework requirements that must be met in order to successfully complete your program of study. During Orientation or your initial visit with the ICP Advising and Practicum Manager, you will review your program agreement, ask questions, and plan your course of study. When you are ready to graduate, the ICP Advising and Practicum Manager will review your transcript and your program agreement to ensure that you have successfully completed all required courses.

The ICP/W flow charts (see attachments) are tools to help you visualize how you will take and sequence your coursework semester to semester.

- For ICP day students, the flow chart represents only ONE pathway through the program; there are many possible options.
- For ICPW students, your flow chart represents when courses will be offered for your cohort.
ICPW students do not have flexibility with regard to the order and sequencing of their courses due to the highly structured nature of the program.

The current program agreements and flow charts for both ICP and ICPW can be found on CIIS Connect /Sharepoint, under Documents tab, on the ICP program home page. See the following section for links and where to find information.

Please direct any questions regarding these to either the Advising and Practicum Manager.

Essential Websites

Sharepoint

CIIS Connect on the Sharepoint site is CIIS's online administrative portal <https://ciisedu.sharepoint.com/sites/connect-icp>. Log in with your CIIS email address and password to access. Note that this information is internal and not publicly available on the CIIS website. Organized by tabs for each department, through CIIS Connect you can view, access, search and download information about:

- Available Scholarships
- Course Syllabi
- A copy of this handbook
- Program Agreements
- Current Flow Charts
- The ICP/W Program Page for dates, documents, important announcements
- Forms for Registration & Practicum
- The Field Placement Office's online database of External Practicum Sites
- And much more...

The ICP Program Page on Sharepoint will serve as a valuable resource during your time in the program.

CIIS email

Once you pay your deposit, a CIIS email address will be issued to you. The email will include your first initial and last name followed by @mymail.ciis.edu (i.e. Student Jack Jones would receive the email: jjones@mymail.ciis.edu). All information from CIIS, from ICP and any other office, will be sent to your CIIS email address. It is therefore essential that you check this email frequently, at least once a day. You are responsible for any information sent to that email address.

Colleague/Elucian

<https://ciis-ss.colleague.eluciancloud.com>

Colleague/Elucian is the 2nd CIIS internal administrative system. Through Elucian you can:

- Register and Pay for Courses
- View your Course Schedule and Grades
- Track the progress of your degree
- View the Course Catalog
- View advising notes
- And more...

Canvas

Canvas is the sole Learning Management System (LMS) supported by CIIS for teaching and learning. It is a site where you can view your course syllabi, submit assignments, view grades and comments on assignments, email your peers and instructor, view announcements, participate in web-conferencing (and more). A Canvas mobile app is also available. Canvas can be utilized in face-to-face, blended/hybrid, or online courses. All courses taught at CIIS will have an associated Canvas course space. However, not all courses may utilize this space. This is up to the individual instructor teaching the course. Please refer to your course syllabi.

For more information or Canvas help, please visit <https://ciis.instructure.com/> and check out the Canvas Student Resources available. You are also welcome to contact the Manager of Online Learning at onlinelearning@ciis.edu.

New Student Orientation

Our ICP Orientation follows the CIIS university-wide orientation each fall and spring. It is important that all new students attend both the ICP and university-wide orientations. The CIIS Orientation will provide important information you need to know about how things work at CIIS and will help you identify the various departments to visit for assistance with your student needs. At the ICP Orientation, you will meet our Program Co-chairs, core faculty and staff; connect with your peers, learn important tips and information specific to our program, including expectations. The ICP Library and Writing orientation will provide a brief review of the specific kinds of papers (Process or Self Reflection, Critical Reflection and Theoretical or Research) and graduate level writing required by ICP.

ICPW Students

The ICPW Orientations will be held during the first fall weekend that the program is in session.

Retreat Intensive

ICP students

At the beginning of your first semester, all new ICP students are required to attend a several day-long residential intensive. This retreat is usually held before classes start or in the first month. Roughly half of one of your courses for the fall are completed at the retreat center. The remainder is completed on campus. Fees for lodging and meals will be charged separately in addition to tuition costs. These can be added to your financial aid. No alcohol or substance use will be allowed at the retreat and 100% attendance is required.

ICPW Students

ICPW students attend a mandatory week-long intensive retreat each year during the month of August.

Please note: Because CIIS must arrange advance contracts with retreat sites, exceptions for these fees can be considered only in situations where students have a medical reason or family emergency, supported by licensed professional documentation, to decline lodging and/or meals at the retreat site.

Requests for exceptions must be submitted in writing at least one week in advance of the retreat to the ICP Program Coordinator or ICPW Program Coordinator. Approval for an exemption from retreat site lodging and/or meals does not guarantee approval by the Financial Petition Committee (FPC) of an exemption from fee payment. Refund requests can be submitted to the FPC within ninety days of the last day of the retreat by completing a Financial Petition Form found on the Student Affairs website.

Retreats offer bonding and community for all students, as well as intensive opportunities for learning. Students have reported to us that these informal settings, such as eating together with faculty and other peers, as well as living together and socializing with peers, to be invaluable in their student experience. The building of relationships in retreat settings between students also helps to support more trust, sharing, and reflexive and reflective learning in the classroom. In addition, the intensive format of multiple classes in a row provides a rare opportunity for deepening theoretical, experiential components of student learning, including classroom discussions, dyads, and creative activities.

Advising

Academic Advising

The ICP Advising and Practicum Manager will help you with any questions you have about course selection and registration, preparing for practicum, selecting a supervisor, and graduation. The ICP Advising and Practicum Manager works closely with our faculty advisors to ensure that all students are on target toward completing their program goals. Students are required to schedule an advising session with the ICP Advising and Practicum Manager before registering for classes at the beginning of their first semester. The ICP Advising and Practicum Manager is also available to help you with any concerns about practicum and offers workshops each fall and spring that cover all the ins and outs of the process. Students are required to attend the Practicum 101 workshop before applying for practicum approval and the Practicum 102 workshop once they have been accepted to a practicum site (before starting practicum). The ICP Advising and Practicum Manager also offers a graduation workshop that we encourage all ICP students to attend during their last semester in the program.

Faculty Advisors

Each student is automatically assigned a faculty academic advisor. Your faculty advisor is available to provide support both personally and professionally as you work your way through the program. Your faculty advisor can help familiarize you to the university processes and culture, connect you to university resources such as the counseling center, navigate a Title IX or VI issue related to harassment, sexual abuse or discrimination, help direct you to appropriate offices if you need a leave of absence for instance, be a mentor for professional questions, or help you navigate a grievance. Your faculty advisor plays a valuable role in many processes outlined in the CIIS student handbook and is an important advocate for you. Some students will utilize more support from their faculty advisor, and some students may prefer to work more independently. We recommend that students meet with their faculty advisor a minimum of two times during the program, first for an initial meeting sometime during the 1st year to get to know your advisor and second for a practicum readiness consultation, which is required. During the required practicum readiness consultation, your advisor will discuss your clinical skills, practicum readiness, and any other issues pertaining to your preparation to start seeing clients. They may also help you explore your specific interests and discuss possible placement considerations. Although we specify these two meeting times, we encourage you to meet with your faculty advisor any time you feel you need additional support during the program.

If you would like to switch faculty advisors please contact the Advising and Practicum Manager for details on the process.

Registration

What courses should I take?

We ask that all new full-time ICP students register for the following four courses (10 units) their first semester:

- Multicultural Counseling and the Family
- Therapeutic Communication
- Psychodynamics
- Integral Yoga

Day program students are allowed some flexibility in their course sequencing but are encouraged to intersperse experiential and lecture-oriented classes so as not to have more than one or two experiential classes in a semester.

Research Methods and Group Dynamics is not recommended for first-year students.

Couples Counseling is not recommended for first-semester students but must be taken before students are allowed to see couples in practicum.

Family Dynamics and Therapy may not be taken in the first semester.

See the flowcharts for a suggested flow chart of courses.

ICPW Students

The ICPW program has been designed with all of these recommendations in mind.

See the flow chart in Appendix B for more information.

Registration & Class Schedule

It is important to begin to familiarize yourself with the Registrar's Office and the various policies, deadlines and forms you will be expected to follow and use during your course of study. Official policies are provided in the Academic Catalog, which is published on the CIIS website. The Academic Calendar, which contains many important semester deadlines, is published on the public CIIS website (<https://www.ciis.edu/academics/academic-calendar>). Class schedules are published online twice a year, once for the spring semester and once for the combined summer and fall semesters. Check the Academic Calendar to see when the class schedule will be posted for each semester. Each semester's schedule of courses for all programs can be found in Colleague Self-Service by clicking the Course Catalog tile. Online registration instructions are published on the Registrar's page on SharePoint.

Course Prerequisites

Many of our courses have prerequisites. Please be sure to review the prerequisites for each course when planning each semester to ensure you have met the requirements before registering. Please note: the ICPW curriculum is structured so that all prerequisites are completed in proper sequence.

Pre-practicum Course Requirements

The following courses must be successfully completed before you can apply for practicum approval. It is recommended that students take these classes as early as possible in the program:

- Gestalt Therapy
- Professional Ethics and Family Law[†]
- Psychopathology and Psychological Assessment[†]
- Human Development & the Family
- Psychodynamics
- The Clinical Relationship
- Therapeutic Communication
- Family Dynamics and Therapy
- Multicultural Counseling and the Family
- Integral Philosophy, Meditation, and Yoga in the 21st Century

[†] Professional Ethics and Family Law, and Psychopathology & Psychological Assessment may be taken while applying for practicum approval but must be successfully completed before starting practicum.

Authorized Early Registration

Students may be allowed authorized early enrollment for classes if one of the following two cases apply:

- The student needs the class in order to apply for practicum approval the next semester.
- The student needs the class in order to graduate that semester.

Students must meet with the Advising and Practicum Manager in order to determine eligibility and receive approval for priority enrollment. If priority enrollment is approved, the Advising and Practicum Manager must sign a Priority Registration Form. Priority registration may not be conducted online. Authorized Early Registration opens one week before standard registration begins each semester and remains open until standard registration begins. Students are responsible for checking the Academic Calendar for registration dates and arranging to meet with the Advising and Practicum Manager for the necessary approvals before priority enrollment opens.

*Please note: A phone message or written note is not considered to be adequate consultation with the academic advisor. You must meet in person or on Zoom.

Grading Options

Most classes in the program are offered for a grade of Pass or No-Pass only (P/NP). Some are offered for a letter grade (LG) or with the option of either P/NP or LG (OP). If your course is listed as OP, you must select your preferred grading option when registering. Courses that are listed as OP will default to a letter grade after the semester add/drop deadline if you have not emailed registrar@ciis.edu to request otherwise. Please note: There is no way to adjust grading options once the add/drop deadline has passed.

Transfer Units

It is possible to satisfy up to 1/6 of your degree requirements through approved coursework taken at another accredited graduate institution. For more information and coursework approval, consult with the Advising and Practicum Manager. Review the most recent General Catalog for more information and guidelines.

Integrative Seminar

Integrative Seminar is considered our capstone course – the culminating class in which we see how you have integrated your learnings from throughout your time in the program. Students must have completed at least one semester of practicum before enrolling in this course because course requirements call for the articulation of actual case material to practice and demonstrate this integration.

General Electives

Students may take their elective units from any other graduate program at CIIS. However, each program determines whether its courses are open to students from other programs. If you are considering an elective outside our program, please check with the host program to make sure it is open to ICP students.

Leave of Absence

Students not planning to enroll for a semester should review the “Maintaining Active Student Status” section in the Academic Catalog to determine whether a leave of absence (LOA) is necessary. The Academic Catalog can be found on the CIIS website (www.ciis.edu) under Academics/Academic Catalog.

To be granted a LOA, submit a Leave of Absence Form, signed by your faculty advisor and approved by the Program Co-Chairs, to the Registrar’s Office. Financial aid recipients also need a signature from the Financial Aid Office, and F-1 or J-1 visa holders also need a signature from the International Student Advisor.

Important ICP/W Policies

AI and updated academic integrity policy

Because students come from many different backgrounds and have varied experiences around AI, ChatGPT, and other forms of artificial intelligence, we want to reiterate the updated CIIS policy of academic integrity in the 24-25 CIIS catalog which now requires any AI use in all work for classes to be acknowledged and cited. All work submitted in a course should be produced without the aid of unsanctioned AI tools. In other words, while you may choose to use AI tools to, for example, search for information or format references in APA style, all work submitted must be entirely your own, including translations, and should not be copied directly from AI generated sources to avoid violating standards of academic integrity. If you have any doubts about what is considered acceptable use, please review the policy in the catalog and discuss with your instructors.

ICP/W COVID Policy

Students who have tested positive for COVID should not come to campus and should follow CDC guidelines for isolation. Due to the fact that we are only accredited as an in-person program, only students who have covid or have an accommodation from OSAS will be allowed to zoom in. (Note that students should not share zoom links with other students). If a student has any questions about COVID exposure, they should consult with their instructor before returning to in person or zooming in. See the CDC website for more information.

Personal Psychotherapy Therapy Requirement

Students are required to receive individual (virtual or in-person psychotherapy) with a licensed clinician (MFT, psychologist, psychiatrist, LCSW, or AMFT with 2000+ hours towards licensure) for a minimum of 50 sessions while completing their degree in ICP/W. These 50 sessions must be accrued as follows:

- A minimum of 20 sessions must be accrued before practicum approval. A signed Therapy Verification form documenting these sessions must accompany the student's application for practicum approval.
- A minimum of 30 sessions must be accrued during practicum. A signed Therapy Verification form of these additional sessions must be provided with graduation clearance paperwork.

This therapy must be done with the same therapist, so please allow plenty of time to interview therapists to ensure that you find someone you can commit to working with for the duration of your time in ICP/W.

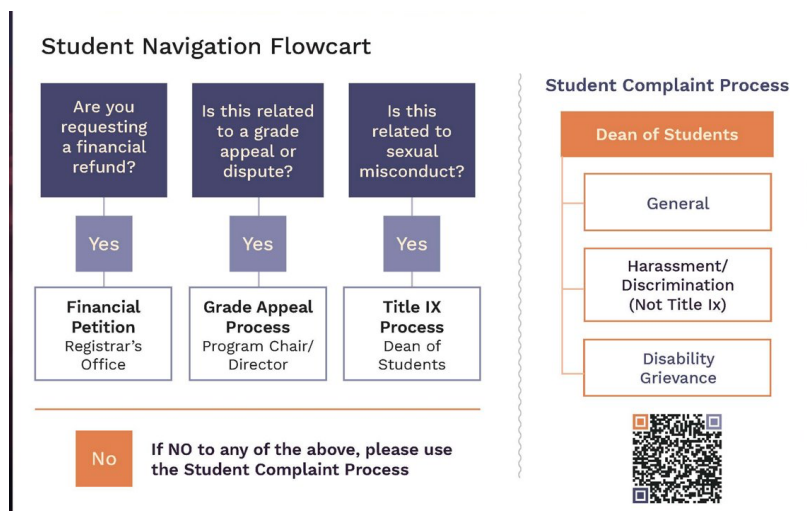

Note: Any changes will require the approval of your faculty advisor and you are only allowed one change. Your therapist must sign a Therapy Verification Form (available on the ICP/W SharePoint page) as proof of completion of this requirement both before beginning practicum (proof of 20 completed sessions) and again for graduation completion (proof of 30 additional completed sessions).

Note: This requirement must be fully completed in order for you to receive your degree from CIIS.

Student Grievance Process

While our faculty and staff go above and beyond to ensure that you have a positive, supportive experience, there may be times when you are concerned and need to speak to someone about your experience. In ICP/W, the student grievance process is as follows:

1. If the concern is happening in class, speak to your instructor
 - a. If you feel that your concern is not resolved at this stage, or your concerns are external to the classroom, go to the next step.
2. Speak to your faculty advisor
 - a. Reach out by email to schedule an appointment with your faculty advisor, who will listen to your concerns and may offer various university resources to assist you, such as the Wellness Center, the Office of Student Accessibility Services, or Student Affairs (issues such as bias, discrimination, or harassment are handled by Student Affairs). Because a transformative program can elicit challenging emotions that may be difficult to sort out, your advisor may also offer their own advice and suggestions depending on the situation. However, if the situation is more serious, or your advisor cannot resolve it, move to the next step.
3. Contact one of the co-chairs (Sangeeta Swamy for ICP day students and Anna Bennasi for ICPW weekend students)
 - a. Co-chairs will listen to your concerns and may offer advice and/or consultation with other parties in the university as necessary. If the situation is more serious and unable to be resolved by your own actions, discussion with co-chairs, or through recommended university support services, you may choose to move onto the next step.
4. File a formal grievance with Student Affairs outlined below:

Other Course Related Information

Class Attendance Policy

Students are expected to attend all class meetings regularly and punctually. Students are assigned an F (Failure) or NP (No Pass) grade if they are absent for more than 20 percent of a course. This maximum includes both excused and unexcused absences. Three instances of tardiness or leaving early are considered equivalent to one absence. Instructors may permit a student to deviate from this rule on the grounds of illness necessitating confinement for 24 hours or more, a death in the family, or other extreme emergencies. The instructor may request verification of these circumstances by a letter from a medical professional, the Dean of Students, or the Academic Vice President as appropriate. Due to the nature of some courses, individual programs, departments, and instructors may enforce stricter policies than these. Check the program handbook and/or the syllabus of a course to see these policies.

Course Syllabi

ICP and ICPW course syllabi are posted to the ICP Program Page on Sharepoint/CIIS Connect, as well as to Canvas course pages, at least two weeks before the start of each semester. Syllabi contain instructor contact information, course meeting times, course assignments and reading lists. It is important that you review course syllabi before the semester starts, since reading and other assignments may be due on the first day of class.

Course Readers

Many instructors use Coursepacks or Readers—a bound collection of articles—in addition to or instead of textbooks. Readers are available for purchase before the start of each semester. Details should be included in your Course Syllabi and from the Akademos bookstore. You can also obtain information on where to purchase readers from the course instructor.

Electronic Reserves

Some course reading material may be available on electronic reserve (ERes). All material on ERes is password protected and is available from the CIIS Laurance S. Rockefeller Library website (<http://library.ciis.edu>). If your instructors have placed course readings on ERes, they will indicate this on their course syllabi and provide a password.

Public Programs

Public Programs (P3) offers a selection of workshops that can be taken as electives for academic credit. They also offer special events and concerts at a discount to CIIS students. Please visit their website at www.ciis.edu/publicprograms to view their offerings and check discount rates. Be sure to bring your student ID to present at check in. Contact Public Programs staff by email at publicprograms@ciis.edu with questions. Workshops taken for academic credit will be charged the per unit rate.

LPCC and LMFT Licensure

Licensed Professional Clinical Counseling (LPCC) is a CA licensing option for master's in counseling degree graduates and is regulated by the Board of Behavioral Sciences as is the Licensed Marriage and Family Therapist (LMFT) option. See the LPCC FAQ page in Sharepoint/CIIS Connect for more detailed information.

In California, the MFT and LPCC licenses operate in largely the same way. In other states, however, different laws and regulations may govern how the MFT license and the LPCC license practice. Because licensure requirements vary widely by state, it is essential that you research how different types of licensed professionals practice in the state in which you live or plan to practice.

LPCC's must undergo additional coursework and additional practicum hours prior to graduation on topics such as: career counseling, treatment of addiction, psychopharmacology and additional psychological assessment. If you complete the LPCC track, you will be eligible for both the MFT and LPCC license in California.

The LPCC track requires these additional courses

1. MCP 5023 Advanced Treatment of Addiction (2.00 unit) offered in the Fall
2. MCP 6331 Psychological Assessment: Psychometric Theory (3.00 unit) offered in the Summer
3. MCP 5646 Career Counseling Theory and Practice for Therapists (3.00 unit) offered in the Spring
4. MCP 5109 Psychopharmacology (3.00 unit) offered in the Summer

For LPCC licensure, 3 units of ethics is required. Based on the program you're in, you may need this additional ethics class.

5. MCP 5651 CA Ethics and the Law (1.00 unit) offered in the Fall

If you are declaring the LPCC track, work with your advisor in your 1st semester to plan your course workload. Your program will have a curriculum map for you to follow, and you'll add in the LPCC coursework to the core MFT courses when they are offered. It's important to work with your advisor so that you have a plan in place to take these classes when they are offered since they are only offered one time per year. Please see above to note when the LPCC track classes are scheduled. All LPCC courses are offered online so as to accommodate all students, some of whom are distance students.

The Board of Behavioral Sciences, or BBS, is the ultimate authority on licensing laws for the state of California. It is important to become familiar with their website (www.bbs.ca.gov) as BBS requirements change over time. It is also important to make a clear distinction between the Board of Behavioral Sciences (BBS) educational requirements and ICP/W program requirements. The ICP/W programs are designed to include all of the educational content that the licensing board requires in the master's degree program, as well as most of the other BBS requirements that must be completed prior to licensure.

Graduate Level Writing

Writing Guidelines

The written components of the ICP Program have been designed to develop your ability to reflect on your experience and gain knowledge and perspective about whatever you may encounter both in the program and for the rest of your career. The writing components offer formats for you to digest the many significant experiences you will encounter here, as well as further your capacities for openness, flexibility, empathy, recognizing insights, making new connections, and engaging in deep critical thought. Being able to express your ideas clearly and thoughtfully is an integral part of being fully present.

You will be expected to write three kinds of papers in this program: Process or Self Reflection, Critical Reflection and Theoretical or Research papers. Each instructor assigns papers slightly differently, but students are expected to write graduate level, critical, reflective, and well-proofread papers.

1. The Process or Self-Reflection Paper involves exploring your personal response to, and understanding of, an experience that is relevant to your professional development. It expresses an open and sincere investigation of your response to something or your patterns in the world, looking for the potential roots of these patterns. These papers may include the larger contexts of your strengths, your essence as well as your personality, personal histories or biases, the developmental direction you may be going in, vulnerabilities, emotions, body sensations, and other spiritual perspectives about how these patterns relate to something “larger” than yourself.
2. The Theoretical or Research Paper usually involves combining theory and research from the field’s academic and scholarly literature. It acknowledges and organizes the major previous contributions to the topic while offering something new from your own perspective. It makes use of established writers and experts to move an idea or viewpoint forward, and augments that with your own cogent, well-supported by literature, and well-communicated conceptual arguments. The purpose is to help you understand and interpret the literature of your profession throughout your career, as well as to potentially contribute to it.
3. The Critical Reflection Paper combines the above two, weaving theoretical concepts with personal reflections or examples from people and situations you know, and demonstrates an ability to view the concepts and your experience from multiple lenses and perspectives. In contrast to the theoretical or research paper, your own ideas about and application of the concepts are equally important to academic literature. Other details of this paper may vary between instructors.

The Center for Writing and Scholarship (CWS) is available for consultation any time you need writing assistance during your time in the program. They offer free writing workshops and one-on-one tutoring for students, and we encourage you to take advantage of their services. For more information, please visit the CWS Program Page (<https://ciisedu.sharepoint.com/sites/cws>) or contact cws@ciis.edu

Evaluation Thresholds

We view your educational experience as extending from the classroom all the way through your everyday interactions with fellow students, faculty, staff and administration. We invite you to join us in what we hold as a psychospiritual educational community, in which all of us are practicing disciplines that support both our own development and that of the larger group. These disciplines include taking responsibility for and remaining curious about our own experience and relating to others with compassion, respect, and constructive action. This can be somewhat challenging if you are feeling frightened, angry and/or activated by situations, yet psychological and spiritual literature identify these experiences as vital for professional, personal and spiritual growth.

Starting with your first class and throughout your entire time in the program, you are asked to cultivate and practice ways to compassionately share your truth while also carefully listening to, respecting, and honoring the experience and perspectives of others (including students, faculty, staff and/or administration). To help support this ongoing practice, CIIS has created a list of guiding community principles that students are expected to follow below. Note that these may be altered or added to by faculty members at the beginning of each course:

- Step out of your comfort zone
- Use “I” statements
- Participate fully
- Ok to disagree
- Not ok to blame, shame, attack
- Both/and thinking
- Intent and impact
- Check out your assumptions
- Confidentiality

Program Professionalism

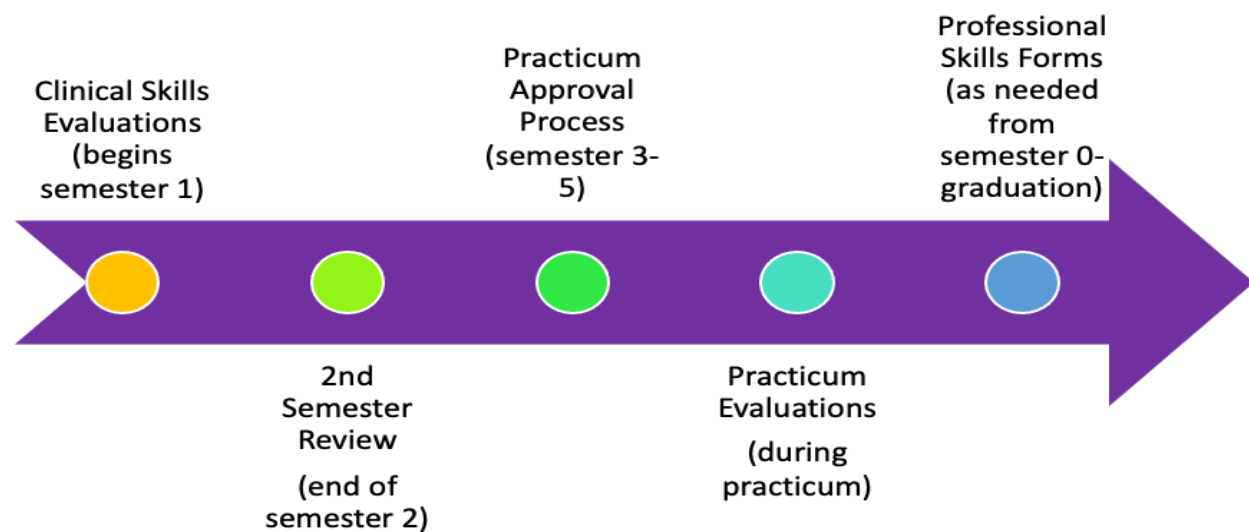

Given the experiential nature of the education you will receive in the ICP/ICPW Program, we understand that there will be moments of personal challenge that come along with the development of psychospiritual and professional growth. We ask that you practice awareness, right/noble speech and centeredness in your actions as you move through the program, practicing the utmost professionalism in your interaction with fellow students, faculty, and staff. See the Professional Skills document in Appendix D for more details.

Evaluating your Progress

Our program is experiential in nature and is designed to help you begin to embody the role of clinician from day one in a supportive learning atmosphere. As you begin to practice, you will receive constructive feedback from a variety of sources - your classmates, instructors, teaching assistants, and faculty advisors as well as clinic directors and supervisors during practicum. We monitor students through all phases of their education, evaluating their progress to ensure that they are building the skills needed to complete the program and provide effective therapeutic service to the public. This feedback is provided in service of your growth as a clinician. We hope that you will receive it in the spirit with which it is intended and allow it to help you gain more awareness of both your strengths and areas that can be improved. Since your faculty advisor serves as your main advocate and contact through this process, it is important to check in with them regularly.

There are currently 4 main thresholds for you to receive feedback on your progress and readiness for the field (clinical skills evals, 2nd semester review, practicum approval and practicum evals), and a professional skills form only used as needed. See the following pages for descriptions of each of these processes.

1. Clinical Skills Evaluations

Clinical Skills Evaluations forms are filled out by instructors at the end of every pre-practicum course that you take. These are designed to give you ongoing feedback in areas such as professional conduct and skills particular to a specific course to help you prepare and gain readiness for your practicum placements. See Appendix C for the exact form used. Your faculty advisor will review these forms with you when you prepare your practicum application. Please reach out to your advisor if you would like view these forms while preparing your practicum application or at any time.

2. 2nd Semester Review

This review is completed collectively by ICP/W core faculty after students have completed their first 2 semesters and evaluates student knowledge, clinical skills and personal and professional skills and conduct in several areas and across all courses. This includes grades as well as personal conduct and interactions with peers, faculty, and staff that are important in your development as a professional. The purpose is to increase transparency and to let students know where they are on track and if there are any areas that students need to address before the practicum approval process in later semesters.

Students will be given one of four outcomes below:

Green (Meets expectations) indicates that students are on track academically, professionally and personally at this point, demonstrating conduct in alignment with ICP/W expectations of professional conduct and skills.

Gray (No outstanding concerns) indicates that there are no outstanding concerns, however, there is a limited amount or no data on a student, for instance due to being a transfer student.

Yellow (Requires attention) indicates that there are minor areas that need attention such as missing paperwork, a 2 rating on clinical evaluation forms, or other similar issues.

Red (Requires immediate attention) indicates that there is one or more serious areas that need attention before students can proceed in the program, such as failing grades, academic probation, disciplinary violations, multiple ratings of 1 on clinical evaluation forms, or other similar issues.

Note that a green rating does not necessarily guarantee practicum approval in the future. Students with a yellow or red rating will be given recommendations to support their development which may include submitting required paperwork, retaking a class, attending therapy or additional trainings, taking Clinical Lab, a required independent study, or additional measures. Students who receive a red rating and are unable to sufficiently demonstrate improvement will be given an academic warning. If they are unable to meet requirements of the academic warning they will be dismissed from the program.

3. Practicum Approval Process

At the beginning of the 3rd, 4th, or sometimes 5th or later semester, students will prepare a practicum application (see the practicum application on Sharepoint and the practicum handbook for more details) that outlines their learnings, strengths, areas of growth, countertransference and other areas since the start of the program. Students should schedule a meeting with their faculty advisor to review their application which will be presented to the entire faculty and staff during a faculty meeting. Faculty will discuss students' progress and strengths and any areas for improvement, considering clinical evaluation forms, the 2nd semester review, reports from faculty and staff and other available data. Students who demonstrate professional and personal readiness for starting practicum will be approved to begin interviewing at practicum sites. See the practicum handbook and the ICP/W Sharepoint pages for more details on this process. Given the challenging nature of a transformative program, however, some students may need more time to integrate their learnings and work through any challenges. These students will be given recommendations and resources to increase their readiness for beginning practicum and encouraged to apply in a later semester. Occasionally it may become apparent that the program or the counseling field is not suitable for a particular student who will not be able to continue in the program. These students may be given the opportunity to complete the program with a non-clinical degree.

4. Practicum Evaluations

Once students have been accepted to a practicum site, supervisors will fill out evaluations each semester where students will also receive ongoing feedback on their progress and areas of growth to continue their development as psychotherapists in training. See the practicum handbook for more details.

5. Professional Skills Form (as needed) (Appendix D)

Outside of the previous thresholds, each instructor and practicum supervisor is required to monitor and assess the student's progress and to notify the student's faculty advisor or the Program Co-Chairs if they have any concerns about the student's performance. When an instructor or supervisor is concerned about any part of a student's work at any time and feels that the program should be made aware of the concern, the following steps are to be followed:

- a. The instructor or supervisor discusses the concern with the student and attempts to resolve it.
- b. If it remains unresolved, the instructor or supervisor should contact the student's faculty advisor or the Program Co-Chairs.
- c. The faculty advisor or the Program Co-Chairs discuss the concern with the student to attempt a resolution.
- d. If concern persists at this point, the concern is brought to the ICP Faculty and Staff who will collectively fill out a Professional Skills Form. See Appendix D for this form.
- e. Students will be given a timeline of suggestions for improvement and/or required or recommended resources to follow up with.

Academic Warnings and Dismissal

With any of the thresholds, students who are unsuccessful in sufficiently demonstrating improvement or meeting academic standards of the university, after repeated attempts and resources offered, will be given an academic warning in writing. See details in the 2024-25 catalog for more details. If unable to demonstrate required improvements after a warning, students may be dismissed from the program or a offered a non-clinical degree. An exception is in the case of serious offense or disciplinary action, where students may be dismissed from the program without an academic warning. Students may also initiate a review as well, by contacting their faculty advisor, if they would like more feedback at any point in the program. All threshold forms will be documented in student's files in the department.

Graduation Clearance

Students must complete the following during their last semester of classes in order to graduate:

Preparing for Graduation

Be sure to attend a Graduation Workshop hosted by the Advising and Practicum Manager to review the steps you need to take in order to prepare for graduation.

Graduation Packet

You must apply to graduate during your last semester. Go to the CIIS Academic Calendar at <https://www.ciis.edu/academics/academic-calendar> for the Graduation Application Deadline for the semester in which you plan to graduate. Check your emails from the Advising and Practicum Manager to view the application deadlines and graduation clearance details.

Therapy Verification Form

Please have your therapist fill out this form then turn it into the Advising and Practicum Manager as soon as you complete your required therapy sessions. Please make sure that 30 sessions take place within your practicum year and only list the sessions that fall within that timeframe, and 20 sessions took place during the first few semesters of your degree program before you began practicum. This form can be found on our Sharepoint site.

Clinical Verification

If you were placed at an ICP ICC, your clinical director must contact the Advising and Practicum Manager directly to verify that you have completed at least 225 practicum hours for the MFT Track or 280 for the LPCC Track, along with the case notes to go with them. If you were placed at an external site please submit the appropriate BBS paperwork signed by your clinical supervisor to verify you have completed at least 225 practicum hours for the MFT Track or 280 for the LPCC Track. See the practicum handbook for more details.

Confirm your Address

Your official transcript and program certification will be sent to the address on file in Elucian approximately 2-3 weeks after the date grades are due. Please make sure it is correct and make changes if needed to ensure timely delivery of these documents that you will need to apply for your BBS intern number.

Evaluation of Site & ICP Supervisor

Please complete and turn in your ICP Supervisor and Practicum Site Evaluation form to the Advising and Practicum Manager (see Sharepoint and/or the Practicum Handbook for these forms). This gives you a chance to offer feedback about your experience at your site for the program.

Financial Aid Loan Counseling Form

If you received financial aid during your time at CIIS, you must log into the FAFSA website (<https://fafsa.ed.gov>) and complete the Financial Aid Loan Counseling form. Please contact Financial Aid directly at finaid@ciis.edu with questions or if you need additional support.

Institution Research Survey

All CIIS students are asked to complete this survey once they complete the program. Once you submit your Graduation Application you will receive an email from the Registrar's Office with instructions on how to access the survey. We use this information to continue to refine and improve our program so we greatly appreciate your feedback.

Transcript Request

Once you have completed all requirements for your degree, you must also submit a request to the National Student Clearinghouse to have the Registrar submit an official transcript and program certification to the BBS on your behalf, both of which are required parts of your associate application to the BBS.

Commencement Ceremony

There is only one commencement ceremony each year at CIIS, which takes place in May. Students who have completed everything but their last semester of practicum may walk in the ceremony. To participate in the ceremony, you must complete your Graduation Application by the deadline noted in the Academic Calendar during the spring semester. Students who graduate at the end of summer or fall semester will be eligible to participate in the commencement ceremony the following year. The Office of Strategic Communication and Relations is in charge of making arrangements for the ceremony. They will send you an email with a Commencement Intent form for you to complete. If you have not received it by the end of January after the semester you have graduated or have other questions about commencement, please contact their office at oscr@ciis.edu.

Register for BBS Intern Number

In order to register for an associate number with the BBS, you must download the application packet from their website at www.bbs.ca.gov and follow their instructions. To complete the application, you will need an official transcript and program certification from CIIS. Please review pp. 41-42 for instructions on obtaining those. Both documents must remain in sealed envelopes until they arrive at the BBS.

ICP Program Advising Flow Chart Spring 2025

Suggested flow of courses

This is one pathway through the ICP program. ICP recommends this sequence, but it is not required. Meet with your Academic Advisor, Program Coordinator, or the ICP Advising Manager to discuss alternatives. Not every required course is offered every semester.

1st Semester Spring 2025

- ☐ MCPI 5610 Therapeutic Communication (3)
- ☐ MCPI 6603 Multicultural Counseling and the Family (3)

See below for more details and explanation of each skill.

Punctuality and Readiness:

- o Punctuality to class and all training obligations, meetings, and appointments.
- o Communicating any lateness as soon as possible, explaining their circumstances in a professional manner.
- o Arrive ready to participate, self-regulated, have the required materials, rested, taken care of their own needs prior to arriving, addressed any other distractions, and are poised to begin.
- o Take the responsibility to maintain contact information in order to reach others when needed (e.g. faculty, supervisors and clients) during missed, critical incidents or emergencies.

- o Address issues up front and intentionally, and demonstrate dependability in communications and reliability.

Notetaking and Records:

- o Because the profession requires accurate and timely professional notetaking, we evaluate students' capacity to keep and store important documents prior to graduation as a proxy for these skills.
- o Take complete responsibility for maintaining accurate Board of Behavioral Sciences (BBS) and Board of Psychology (BOP) notes and records such as hours logs and copies of important documents associated with licensure application (e.g. supervisor agreements, recommendations, transcripts).
- o Complete all written documentation related to clinical work in accordance with the timelines set by the clinical site. This includes clinical notes.

Collaboration, Supervision and Consultation

- o Understand their scope of practice, ethical responsibility and level of competency.
- o Consult with licensed practitioners and supervisors with an open-minded stance and take in the feedback of these supervisors.
- o Make supervisors aware of potential liabilities and ethical issues that are unfolding with client work as a measure of developing clinical judgment.
- o Maintain an open and collaborative approach to supervision. While it is not uncommon for differences in perspective to arise between supervisors and trainees, therapists in training
- o Use dynamic tensions in supervision constructively to explore differences to hone clinical judgment and develop.
- o In challenging situations, honor the judgment of the licensed professional under whom students practice, while they are in training.
- o In the event there is a conflict between supervisor and student, faculty and student, student and student, or student and staff during the program, follow CIIS institutional policies and processes as stated in the program handbook and training manuals. This includes discussions with the program advisor, program chair or clinic Director, Dean of Students and Provost in that order.

Communication and Self-Regulation Skills:

- o Maintain professional boundaries with clients and other professionals in their interactions.
- o Demonstrate congruence between non-verbal and verbal behavior
- o Be fully present with others and have openness for feedback in training and academic work.
- o Communicates constructively in the classroom, engaging authentically, honestly, and thoughtfully with in-class discussions as well as written assignments
- o Communicate using professionalism and self-regulation even when clients or others are dysregulated, tangential or labile, have uncommon ways to express themselves, or struggle with cognition and or behavior in these areas.

- o Use intentionality and discernment as a means of supporting collaborative engagement with a broad range of clients, honoring sociocultural differences and personal preferences that come to bear on these dimensions of engagement, such as tone of voice, eye contact, embodied navigation of spaces, verbal and nonverbal communication
- o Manage any mental health or physical health conditions in order to maintain effective and professional work relationships with others.
- o In the instance that a mental or physical health condition arises that interferes with the therapist in training's ability to conduct themselves according to these standards, or to effectively serve clients to the standards of the clinical setting, proactively seek support, consultation, and potentially be released from duties so that such conditions can be addressed satisfactorily.
- o Manage and explore transference and countertransference professionally through supervision and self-reflection. This includes understanding and managing defenses, triggers, trauma responses, erotic, aggressive, and avoidant feelings and impulses, as well as fantasies.
- o Demonstrate the capacity to regulate their emotions and engage in effective interpersonal and social communication with others including peers, staff, faculty and supervisors as well as the public.
- o Understand the impact they have on others and take this impact into consideration in their behaviors in service of collaborative engagement with others.
- o Raise any concerns or serious issues professionally and within the formal channels. Should these channels fail to meet their needs, they may choose to escalate these concerns professionally and in a self-regulated manner first to their advisor or the Department chair or Clinic Director (if the issue pertains to the practicum experience) and then to the Dean of Students and the Provost.
- o Follows the APA Code of Ethics in all interactions with students, staff, faculty, and others

Listening, Empathy and Memory

- o Consider and value multiple points of view.
- o Track what others have said with reasonable accuracy as it relates to a clinical dialogue and supervisory dialogue.
- o Demonstrate flexibility and empathy in the clinical and supervisory relationship
- o Make meaning from others' narratives in a way that does not diminish the value of other people.
- o Recognize and support the sociocultural beliefs, worldviews, values, languages, behaviors and communication styles of others.
- o Demonstrate remorse for any transgressions and a willingness to repair ruptures

Critical Thinking, Numeracy, Literacy

- o Manage hours logs, fees and other important numeric tasks accurately and professionally in a timely manner.
- o Seek support and accommodations when needed
- o Integrate alternative conceptualizations and consider adjunct therapies, interpretations and solutions when necessary, and seek supervision to consider these ideas and to help hone this capacity from licensed others.

Hygiene, Dress and Atmosphere

- o Develop a professional presentation that supports the therapeutic endeavor
- o Maintain a reasonable level of hygiene and avoid excessive scents and strong-smelling food in clinical spaces.
- o Avoid the use of cell phones during sessions except in emergencies.
- o Provide a clean and comfortable setting for psychotherapy.
- o Learn the safety protocols associated with the space they are practicing in (e.g. earthquake and power outages, evacuation protocols, security protocols).
- o Not be under the influence of drugs and alcohol in any clinical, supervisory, or educational setting. In the age of psychedelic assisted therapy, make sure that any prescribed clinically tracked journeys do not coincide with attendance in school or at practicum.
